Thompson's photos at UW-hospital exhibit

Middleton resident (and MTT contributor) Elizabeth Thompson's

"Regeneration" is part of an exhibit of over 50 photographers at UW-Hospital's B Wing Surgical Waiting Room.

Thompson, who's lived in Middleton since 1998, has been taking photos since 2000. She is a member of the Center for Photography at Madison, a group made up of professional, semi-professional, and serious amateur photographers who are staging the exhibit.

The central image underlying this piece was taken in the Arboretum this past January.

"I wanted an image that spoke to the healing work being done at UW-Hospital - one that medical professionals and patients' families could relate to easily," said Thompson.

The exhibit is open to the public through April 2.

Last chance to help library update service

The Middleton Public Library is in the process of updating its long-range plan of service.

The library board and staff are undertaking a series of activities to gain some feedback from the community. The first of these was a series of focus group discussions, facilitated by library consultant Ethel Himmel, which took place between March 2 and March 9. Now the library is launching a web survey for a two-week period through Saturday, March 24.

Citizens can access the survey at <http://www.libraryconsultant.com/MiddletonLibrarySurvey.htm> and offer their opinions and ideas for the library.

Latin Night at the Performing Arts Center

The Friends of the Performing Arts Center in Middleton will present the final concert of their community concert season on Friday, April 13 at 7:30 p.m.

The Tony Castaneda Latin Jazz Sextet and Dando Mambo Dance Company take the stage at the PAC in a pairing that promises an evening of colorful, rhythmic, contemporary Latin jazz and dance. A reception with desserts provided by the Hubbard Avenue Diner will be held before the
